

BLOCKED FOR HOURS.

An Axle Breaks on a Bridge
Car This Morning.

Fully 25,000 Brooklynites Had to Walk Over.

A String of People Reaching Clear
Across the Structure.

Fully 25,000 Brooklynites who are employed in New York were late to work and business this morning because of a block on the East River bridge that lasted for hours and was caused by the breaking of a car axle.

The accident, which occurred shortly before 8 o'clock, was of a simple nature, yet most complex and far-reaching in its effects.

The car which caused all the trouble was No. 51. It was the second in a train of four cars that left the New York side shortly before 8 o'clock. As is usual during the "rush" hours, the train was well filled, although not crowded like those coming from the Brooklyn side.

The train had nearly reached that point on the bridge which is over Franklin Square when there was a quick snap, and the next minute the occupants of the car were shaken up and scattered almost out of their seats by the bumping, clumping, bumping of the train.

The guard on car 51 was quick to pull the bellcord and loosen the grip, or the result might have been serious. His action was promptly followed by the other guards, and what would have undoubtedly proved a bad wreck was fortunately averted.

Women and girls screamed, men started to jump from the cars, and a first-class panic seemed imminent for a moment. Confusion was speedily restored, however, by the prompt stopping of the car, and no one was injured. Then the train with its jumbled crowd of cars began to move.

It was found that an axle on the forward truck of the car had broken, and that all four wheels of the truck had come off. The axle broke in the middle, and the broken axle was found lying on the ground. The broken axle was found lying on the ground.

Word was telegraphed to Brooklyn by the bridge police, and a locomotive soon steamed over to the scene, and the broken axle was replaced. The first thing that did was to push and pull the disabled car back and forth with the locomotive and forward car until they got the wheels of the broken truck away from the cable, which was straining mortally against them, and threatening every minute to break itself and stop all cable traffic entirely.

Probably two of the 25,000 related Brooklynites who were late to work and business this morning because of a block on the East River bridge that lasted for hours and was caused by the breaking of a car axle.

Still the railroad people kept sending out trains until the New York side was cleared. The broken axle was found lying on the ground.

At 9 o'clock the wrecking gang left the two rear cars of the wrecked train run back into the New York depot and hauled the forward car over to Brooklyn. Then they began "jacking up" the broken car preparatory to getting the wheels back on the rails. As soon as the passengers were out of the long train of forty-four cars, the wrecking gang began hauling them back to Brooklyn.

At this hour the promenade of the bridge presented a scene seldom witnessed since the big structure was formally opened. The promenade was crowded with people, and the scene was a most unusual one.

Viewed from the dome of the Pulitzer Building, as far as the eye could reach, there extended a long line of people, hustling humanity, which was not decreased in the slightest for an hour. It was a case of Hobson's choice, for unless he or she possessed a carriage or a bicycle, every Brooklynite who crossed the bridge had to walk. After 10 o'clock had to walk. After 10 o'clock a shuttle train, carrying a locomotive, ran back and forth over the north track.

HE HAD BEEN A CAPITALIST.

George Young Sentenced to the Island for Drunkenness.

"It's pretty tough to be sent away for a month all the time of a few paltry dollars," muttered George Young today as he was being led back to the cells after having been sentenced to a month on the island for habitual intoxication. In the Essex Market Police Court this morning the judge pronounced his sentence.

"Once I could have gotten this whole court," continued the prisoner, who bore the unmistakable signs of the professional drinker.

"Why I used to be a big auctioneer, and had a store full of diamonds, gold watches and jewelry, which we auctioned off."

He owned railway stock and gas and water bonds, dined at Delmonico's and kept a valet, but, he added, looking at his old, worn, faded, dirty, ragged clothing, "I give that up some time ago. You can't get a spare time, have you, boss?"

Kennedy May Recover.

James Kennedy, a "rough" Englishman, who was established in the afternoon Saturday night by William T. Neil, another Englishman, who objected to the strike, was alive at 11 o'clock this morning, although he had been pronounced dead by the coroner's jury. As he is a very robust man, the coroner thinks he may possibly survive.

HELPED HER GET DIVORCE.

Frank Andrews Told His Wife
Who the Co-respondent Was.

And Gave Her Other Pointers by Which She Secured the Decree.

Abbie E. Andrews, acting upon the points furnished by her husband, Frank C. Andrews, brought suit against him in the City Court, Brooklyn, to-day, and obtained a decree of absolute divorce.

The couple were married in Brooklyn by Rev. A. S. Jones, of St. Luke's Church, Feb. 25, 1890.

Mrs. Andrews says she left her husband soon afterwards because she suspected he was not a fit person to live with.

She then threatened to sue for a divorce, and her husband gave her the point by which he said she could obtain it.

He named the co-respondent, and referred her to Edward W. Field, of 37 Franklin Avenue, as a witness.

STAMPEDE IN DAYLIGHT.

Twelve Steers Give Williamsburgers a Sample of Life on the Plains.

"Bronco Joe," which is the cowboy name of Joe McCormack, is not so proud of his name and his record to-day as he was yesterday, before twelve of a herd of forty steers, which he and assistants were driving through Williamsburg, organized a little band of freedom and ran amuck for an hour or so, tossing men aside and frightening every one within sight.

The most seriously injured was Dominic Carosso, forty-five years old, of 42 North second street, who was a good foot race, and was taken unconscious to the Eastern District Hospital.

George Norris, a ferry gatekeeper, was tossed twelve feet, and a couple of boys were tossed aside, but only slightly bruised.

The steers were finally caught in the yard of the Nassau night works.

MET DEATH IN A FOOTRACE.

Mrs. Neils Was Seventy-four Years Old, but Lively.

Mrs. Anna Marie Neils, who lived with her daughter, Mrs. Andrew Roesch, at 126 Montrose avenue, Brooklyn, had passed her seventy-fourth birthday and was in the best of health and good spirits, but it remained for her to meet her death at play in a most singular fashion.

Mrs. Neils attended the picnic yesterday at the Methodist Episcopal Church, at Werner's Eldorado, Glendale, L. I. Some one proposed a foot race, and Mrs. Neils entered and ran against much younger competitors till she slipped and fell. Her head struck against a tree, fracturing her skull, from which she died in a few minutes.

MOTORMAN BADLY HURT.

Trolley Car Crashes into a Farmer's Wagon at Flatbush.

At 1 o'clock this morning John Cronin, twenty-three years old, motorman of a Flatbush trolley car, was badly injured after the car and body in a collision with a farmer's wagon on Flatbush avenue.

The car crashed into the rear of the wagon, which was loaded with hay, and the hay was scattered all over the place. The car was badly damaged, and the motorman was badly injured.

John Cronin was taken to the hospital, where he was found to have a fractured skull and a broken leg. He is now in a critical condition.

DIED AT BROADWAY STREET JAIL.

Peter McKillop Expired Before an Ambulance Arrived.

The body of Peter McKillop, of 150 Greene street, was removed from the morgue this morning.

McKillop was committed to jail yesterday for intoxication, and while in his cell last night was attacked with cholera. He died before an ambulance could reach him.

REFUSED INCORPORATION.

United Brotherhood of Brooklyn Mistaken on a Point of Law.

Justice Bartlett, of the Supreme Court, Brooklyn, this morning denied the application of Samuel Rosenblatt and others for the incorporation of a society to be known as the United Brotherhood of Brooklyn.

The objects of the society are set forth in the petition, and the act of incorporation is sought, it is wrong. He refused the application, and the matter will be argued before the regular City Court.

DESERTED ON HER WEDDING DAY.

Mrs. Walz's Husband Now Gets a Divorce in Brooklyn.

Justice Bartlett, of the Supreme Court, Brooklyn, this morning directed that a decree of divorce be issued to Conrad Walz from his wife Franziska Walz.

The couple were married on Nov. 27, 1887, and Walz left his wife the next day. About four months ago Mrs. Walz became a store full of diamonds, gold watches and jewelry, which we auctioned off.

John W. Barlow's Divorce Suit.

Justice Bartlett, of the Supreme Court, Brooklyn, this morning directed that a bill of partition be granted to John W. Barlow against his wife, Jessie A. Barlow.

He is Capt. Avery Now.

Thomas H. Avery, of the Fourteenth Regiment, Brooklyn, was elected captain of the company of the same name, which was organized by the late Captain Avery.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.

When she became a Child, she clung to Castoria.

When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

RAILROAD NOT TO BLAME.

The Manager Says the Berlin Horror Was "Most Unfortunate."

"No Foresight Could Have Prevented It"—Condition of Injured.

LONG ISLAND CITY, L. I., Aug. 28.—At 11:30 General Manager Reynolds, of the Long Island Railroad, gave out the following statement regarding the disaster at Berlin Junction on Saturday night, which sixteen people lost their lives:

"The disaster was a most unfortunate one, but was one that no amount of foresight on the part of the company could prevent. The harsh criticism of the newspapers have indulged in are unequalled for and unjustified. There were double tracks at the place where the accident occurred which were protected by the block system. The engine, cars and equipments were all first-class. The employees were intelligent and were all cautioned for and apparently competent."

"There is no foundation for the report as to the mismanagement of the road by the company. The accident did happen, and the unfortunate character is too apparent. But similar accidents happen on other roads and will happen in spite of any human precaution."

Out of the 1,000,000 passengers carried by this road the percentage of accidents is almost negligible. The company has no desire to treat the press discourteously and never object to any reasonable criticism of its management for any violent abuse of its company."

Dr. Hummer at St. John's Hospital this morning said that there was no improvement in the condition of these patients, and they were considered as being in a critical condition.

Ernest M. Weiss, twenty-two years old, 227 West Sixteenth street, New York, died at St. John's Hospital, New York.

This morning the following notice was posted on the front of the hospital signed by Dr. John F. Burns:

"No one hereafter will be permitted to see these patients, this order being issued for the purpose of preventing the spread of the disease. The patients are in a critical condition, and the hospital is not prepared to receive any more patients."

CHILD DIES FROM HER BURNS.

She and Her Companions Built a Bonfire in the Street.

Five-year-old Freda Klotz, daughter of Mrs. Klotz, living at 28 Macdougall street, Brooklyn, died this morning at St. John's Hospital, New York, from the effects of burns received last night while playing around a bonfire near her home.

The girl, with several companions, built a fire in the street at the corner of Macdougall street and Hudson street. While playing near the fire, her body was enveloped in flames, and she was badly burned.

Her body was found by a neighbor, and she was taken to St. John's Hospital. She died this morning.

TIMMERMAN'S TRIAL PUT OFF.

The Young Anarchist Expected to Plead Guilty on Sept. 6.

There was a big crowd of Anarchists in the Court of Special Sessions this morning when the case of Alexander Timmerman, under arrest for incendiary utterances during the recent labor troubles, was called for trial.

Detective Sergeant Jacobs and Heideberg, of Inspector McLaughlin's staff, with ten witnesses, were on hand to try Timmerman. The case was put off until September 6.

When the case was called on for trial, the court was informed that Timmerman was not present, and the case was put off until September 6.

THE RELIC OF ST. ROSALIE.

To Be on Exhibition in a Brooklyn Church.

It is Especially Dear to the Hearts of Italian Catholics.

The relic of St. Rosalie, dear to the hearts of all Italian Catholics, and patron saint of Palermo, will be placed on exhibition during interesting services at the Church of St. Michael Archangel, on Lawrence street, Brooklyn, to-night.

There have not been any miracles wrought by the relic since its advent in Brooklyn, as Bishop McDonnell, after examining the authenticity of the relic, has just given permission for it to be exhibited.

To the Italians this relic is very dear, as St. Rosalie is said to have been a saint who saved the population of Palermo from a plague of locusts.

She was a daughter of Prince Sinibaldi, and spent her young life in a cave, where she lived on bread and milk. She is considered a saint by the Italians.

It is included in a solid silver case, and is on exhibition at the Church of St. Michael Archangel, on Lawrence street, Brooklyn, to-night.

WALL STREET FEELS BETTER.

The Passage of the Wilson Repeal Bill the Cause.

Business in the Market Due to Interrupted Telegraph Facilities.

While there was no especial activity in the market this morning, the passage of the Wilson Repeal Bill, which was a more confident tone prevailed in consequence of the overwhelming defeat of the free coinage men in the House.

The effect of the vote for unconditional repeal of the Sherman law would be to remove the fear of the action of the Senate. At least, the bears are trying to every way possible to foster the idea that there will be no further silver in the Senate, and managed to get a low to sell out in consequence.

The market advanced 2 1/2 to 2 3/4 in the balance of the day. Subsequently, it declined to 2 1/2 to 2 3/4. The market was closed at 2 1/2 to 2 3/4.

BISMARCK ON GERMAN UNITY.

He Prefers Imperial to Prussian Government.

A Chancellor Had Better Consult His Colleagues.

BERLIN, Aug. 28.—In his speech at Koenigsberg on Sunday to a number of citizens from Frankfurt-on-Main, Prince-Bismarck reminded his hearers of the days when he lived in Frankfurt, and became so domesticated that he selected a spot in a churchyard there for his own grave. During the war of 1866 he was never able to get rid of the temptation to make Frankfurt part of Prussia, although he wished the connection to be voluntary.

It was no desire for conquest, but Frankfurt was the bridge over the Main, the bridge-point for Germany's unity, not in a military, but in a moral and commercial sense. Frankfurt had not become North German, it was more than doubtful whether the neighboring Southern States would not have followed the example of that great commercial emporium. Their visit was a proof that the old wounds had healed, and that they bore him no ill-will for his share in the matter.

In regard to the charge of his being a particularist, the Prince said that there was no legal handle against the Ministers. The only thing was for the people to be able to say to them: "That was a clumsy, not to say stupid, piece of work."

The National cause was based on a calculation that the factors would work together for common questions. If this falls the National feeling would diminish, and this would be a serious matter in case of a change in the European situation.

"I should never dream," continued Prince-Bismarck, of replacing the Imperial with the Prussian Government. The Empire must be ruled by the united efforts of the twenty-five governments. I am uneasy when there is a Chancellor who acts without consulting any one. I had rather see him in the leading strings of his Prussian colleagues. His chief importance lies in his being a member of the Bundestag.

Of the Bundestag had a more direct feeling with Bavaria, Saxony and the other States, and if the Empire was in good order, I think the post-office would gain a great deal by means of their correspondence. My hopes, however, have not been fulfilled.

At this point Prince-Bismarck abruptly concluded his speech, excusing himself for doing so by remarking that he did not desire to tire the ladies by talking politics. He then called for cheers for Frankfurt, which were heartily given.

MOB WRECKS CHOLERA HOSPITAL.

Scourge Spreading in Roumania—One Case in Budapest.

BUDAPEST, Aug. 28.—A mason has died of cholera in the hospital here. It is officially announced that the case was of the Asiatic type. This is the first authentic case of the disease that has occurred here. From Aug. 25 to Aug. 27 there were forty-one new cases of the disease, and twenty-nine deaths in Hungary. The epidemic is less virulent in Roumania, but is spreading rapidly. The Roumanians on the frontier at Miskolc, near Klausenburg, engaged in a riot and demolished the cholera hospital.

The official report shows forty new cases and thirty-one deaths in Galicia yesterday. The disease is assuming a more virulent form.

LONDON, Aug. 28.—A despatch to the Times from Berlin says that one of the stepdaughters of Pinnow, the cholera patient at Nordhausen on Wednesday last and removed to the Moabit Hospital, died to-day.

LONDON, Aug. 28.—The steamships of the Royal Mail Steam Packet Company, which sail from Southampton to South American ports via Antwerp, have been ordered to stop at Antwerp as long as the cholera is epidemic there.

RIOT AT SAN SEBASTIAN.

Troops Finally Drive the Mob to Cover—Many Wounded.

MADRID, Aug. 28.—The riots started at a concert in San Sebastian, province of Guipuzcoa, on Sunday evening, because the orchestra refused to play the Basque Hymn, were repeated yesterday afternoon and last night. The Basques in the theatre shouted that the orchestra play their hymn. The Basques hooted the performance until the actors left the stage, and the police ordered that the curtain be dropped. The mob held possession of the theatre for a few minutes after wards, and then hurried into the streets.

The police were unable to disperse the rioters, who smashed windows and waylaid pedestrians until the troops cleared the streets. Many civilians were wounded. The streets of the city were patrolled by military last night.

FRANCE THREATENS SIAM.

Her Gunboats May Be Sent to Bangkok Again.

BANGKOK, Aug. 28.—The French Government threatens, through its Special Envoy, M. de Vilers, to send back the French gunboats to the Mer de Chine before Bangkok in case its new demands be not granted immediately. The foreign residents of the city are indignant in view of France's persistence in ignoring the provisional agreement reached when Siam accepted the ultimatum.

The absence of neutral warships is a source of great anxiety to the French. They will leave tomorrow. Then the French gunboats will be the only warships in the Gulf of Thailand.
